St. George's Cup Polo Match

As a residential and commercial real estate agent, Laura Rosen is used to showing properties to prospective buyers. At the annual St. George's Cup Polo Match, the Pikesville resident was giving style lessons to other attendees.

The Long and Foster Real Estate employee stunned in a pink and red sundress and bling-tastic designer accessories that wowed while completing the look. "It's so hot out, so I wanted to wear a light, airy dress," she explained. "I love bright colors. And the shoes are very comfortable. I went for a light, airy feeling."

Rosen said she's usually in stylish pants and a fun "colorful" blouse for work.

"I'm not your typical real estate agent," she said.

Rosen said she was excited to attend her first polo match.

"I wanted to experience the game and meet new people," she said, adding that a friend had invited her.

A rainy week resulting in a last-minute change of venue didn't put a damper on the annual St. George's Cup Polo Match. About 100 guests showed up to the Elkridge Harford Hunt Club in Monkton for the festivities. The St. George's Society is a charitable and social organization for the benefit of natives of the United Kingdom. Tickets to the event were $30. And 100 percent of the donations received through the St. George's Society Foundation went directly to the Invictus Games, which is an international event where injured or sick armed services personnel and veterans compete in sporting events, and Help For Heroes, a national program that provides support and counseling to first responders.
